

Brampton photography studio collection. -- [c. 1886-c. 1910]. Over 3,500 images: glass plate negatives ; 12 X 16.5 cm.

In the late 1960s, over 3500 glass plate negatives were collected from the communal attic space over 12/14/16 Main Street North, Brampton. They were acquired for the Peel Museum with the permission of Mr and Mrs. John Waddell, owner of 12 Main St. North, who provided access to the attic through a second storey hatch-way. The attic contained a studio backdrop painted on the south wall, and numerous plates that appeared to have been broken during electrical work. Evidence that a stairway had at some point led to the attic from 14 Main St. was observed. The unbroken plates were removed and placed in Museum storage. The plates were transferred from the Museum to the Region of Peel Archives shortly after its inception in 1977.

The collection was initially attributed to John Ward Cole, probably due to his early prominence in the community. Many family albums contain photographs bearing his imprint. His son, John Fletcher Cole, and grandson, John Bleakley Cole, were both photographers in Brampton but neither appears to have a connection with the commercial buildings at 12/14/16 Main Street North. John Ward Cole was not active as a photographer after c. 1880, and died in 1885. His business was sold to R. H. Trueman who later sold it to A. E. McCollum. McCollum advertised that he had "all the negatives made by Messrs. Cole and Trueman carefully preserved" and continued to operate out of 5 Main Street South, where J. W. Cole had set up a studio in the 1860s. In 1914 fire destroyed the store adjacent to McCollum's studio. According to the Conservator, the damage to McCollum's business was "serious" and "negatives and supplies destroyed." Three months after the fire, McCollum re-opened for business at the same location. Later the same year, McCollum moved to 14 Main Street North, Brampton, the building from which the plates were removed.

In preparation for an exhibit in 1988, research into photographers in Brampton raised significant questions as to the provenance of this collection. To be the work of J. W. Cole, R.H. Trueman and/or A. E. McCollum, they had to have escaped fire damage and been moved to 14 Main St. North by McCollum in 1914. If the fire at 5 Main Street South destroyed the negatives which McCollum had maintained, then the plates found must be the work of another photographer.

In 1997 a match was made between a negative in this collection and an identified print bearing the imprint of Rawe, a photographer advertising in the Conservator between 1885 and 1888. In his notices, Rawe's location was given as "opposite the Revere House," which would place the studio at 16 Main Street North. In April 1888, W. Dawson advertises that he has taken over "G. Rawe's old stand." Most of the photographs in this collection are c. 1885-1890; these can be attributed to G. Rawe and W. Dawson.

What happened to the business after Dawson is unknown. Of the photographers listed in the 1901 census of Brampton (A.E. McCollum, C. E. Perry, Clarence Ellison, A.G. Hamilton, and Richard Herriott), Perry is known to have operated a studio at 14 Main Street North. It is possible that he continued Dawson's work or was at least aware of the negatives in the building. The fact that A. E. McCollum worked out of the building after 1914 may have been coincidental. It is also possible that the backdrops and studio props were purchased by McCollum and used in later work.

Regardless of the uncertainty around provenance, the fonds consists of negatives taken by a studio photographer. The geographic area represented by the photographs is almost exclusively Brampton, Ontario. The work is primarily portraiture; although there are a few images of public and religious buildings. Some copy work of earlier photographs is noted. Regardless of the provenance, these negatives are a valuable resource, representing a substantial body of work by an area photographer, or series of photographers. They also provide a tremendous opportunity to study costume design.

This collection was previously known as the Cole Collection; and the Cole/Trueman/McCollum Studio collection.

The glass plates appear to be dry plates, all but one are negatives. The one positive plate has had coloured [oil] paint applied to the emulsion side. Many plates were retouched by the photographer. Peeling emulsion at the edges of many plates is noted, along with halation. While in museum storage, the negatives were damaged by a furnace explosion, requiring extensive cleaning. The plates were also numbered and placed in acid-neutral enclosures. Any writing on the original envelopes was transferred to an index compiled in 1977 by Dave Douglas, Christl Ganz and Jackie Wright. The appended surname index was created based on the 1977 index. Researchers should be aware that names have been transcribed from the plates and may contain spelling inaccuracies. Additional indexes describing the plates by costume and subject matter are available. There are no copyright restrictions on this collection; credit line should read "gift of John and Laura Waddell." Prints from some negatives were exhibited in "Gifted Views," organized by the Region of Peel Archives, April - May 1996. Accession number 1990.109.
